

HAI

- Thus spoke th' impatient prince, and made a pause;
His foul bag; rais'd their heads, and clapt their hands;
And all the powers of hell, in full applause,
Flourish'd their snakes, and tost their flaming brands. Craab.
2. A witch; an enchantress.
Out of my door, you witch! you bag; you baggage, you poulcat, you runnion. Shakef. Merry Wives of Windsor.
3. An old ugly woman.
Such affectations may become the young;
But thou, old bag, of threecore years and three,
Is shewing of thy parts in Greek for thee? Dryden's Juven.

TO HAG. v. a. [from the noun.] To torment; to harass with vain terror.
That makes them in the dark see visions,
And hag themselves with apparitions. Hudibras, p. iii.
How are superstitious men haggard out of their wits with the fancy of omens, tales, and visions! L'Estrange.

HA'GARD. adj. [hagard, French.]
1. Wild; untamed; irreclaimable.
To let them down before that his flights end,
As bagard hawk, presuming to contend With hardy fowl above his able might,
His weary pounces all in vain doth spend,
To trust the prey too heavy for his flight. Fairy Queen.

2. [Hager, German.] Lean. To this fence I have put the following passage; for so the author ought to have written.
A haggard carion of a wolf, and a jolly fort of dog, with good flesh upon's back, fell into company together. L'Estr.

3. [Hage, Welsh.] Ugly; rugged; deformed; wildly disordered.
She's too disdainful;
I know her spirits are as coy and wild,
As bagard as the rock. Shakespeare.

Fearful besides of what in fight had pass'd,
His hands and hagard eyes to heav'n he cast. Dryden's Æn.
Where are the conscious looks, the face now pale,
Now flushing red, the down-cast hagard eyes,
Or fixt on earth, or slowly rais'd! Smith's Phæd. and Hipp.

HA'GGARD. n. f.
1. Any thing wild or irreclaimable.
I will be married to a wealthy widow,
Ere three days pass, which has as long lov'd me
As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard. Shakespeare.

2. A species of hawk.
Does the wild haggard tow'r into the sky,
And to the South by thy direction fly?
I enlarge my discourse to the observation of the aires, the brancher, the ramish hawk, and the haggard. Walton's Angler.

3. A hag. So Garth has used it for want of understanding it.
Beneath the gloomy covert of an yew,
In a dark grot, the baleful hagard lay,
Breathing black vengeance, and infecting day. Garth.

HA'GGARDLY. adv. [from haggard.] Deformed; ugly.
For her the rich Arabia sweats her gums;
And precious oils from distant Indies come,
How haggardly her looks at home. Dryd. Juven.

HA'GGERS. n. f. [from bag or back.] A mass of meat, generally pork chopped, and inclosed in a membrane. In Scotland it is commonly made in a sheep's maw of the entrails of the same animal, cut small, with fuet and spices.

HA'GGISH. adj. [from bag.] Of the nature of a hag; deformed; horrid.
He lasted long;
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act. Shak. All's well that ends well.

TO HA'GGLE. v. a. [corrupted from hackle or back.] To cut;
to chop; to mangle.
Suffolk first died, and York all haggled o'er Comes to him where in gore he lay inteept'd. Shakef. H. V.

TO HA'GGLE. v. n. To be tedious in a bargain; to be long in coming to the price.
HA'GLER. n. f. [from haggle.]
1. One that cuts.
2. One that is tardy in bargaining.

HA'GLOGRAPHY. n. f. [ἁγία and γράφω.] A holy writer.
The Jews divide the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament into the law, the prophets, and the haglographers.

HAI. interject. An exprobration of sudden effort.
Her coats tuck'd up, and all her motions just,
She stamps, and then cries hai! at ev'ry thrust. Dryden.

HAIL. n. f. [hægel, Saxon.]
1. Drops of rain frozen in their falling.
As thick as hail. Locke.
Came post on post. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

TO HAIL. v. n. To pour down hail.
My people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation when it shall hail, coming down on the forest. Is. xxxii. 19.

HAIL. interj. [hæl, health, Saxon; hail, therefore, is the same as salus of the Latins, or εὐχαι of the Greeks, health be to you.] A term of salutation now used only in poetry; health be to you.
Hail, hail, brave friend!

HAI

Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
As thou did'st leave it. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
Her sick head is bound about with clouds:
It does not look as it would have a hail
Or health with'd in it, as on other morns. Len. Johnson.

The angel hail Bellow'd, the holy salutation us'd Long after to blest Mary, second Eve. Milt. Parad. Lost.
Farewel, happy fields,
Where joy for ever dwells! hail horrors! hail
Infernal world! and thou profoundest hell Receive thy new possessor! Milton's Paradise Lost, b. i.

All hail, he cry'd, thy country's grace and love;
Once first of men below, now first of birds above. Dryd.
Hail to the fun! from whose returning light
The cheerful soldier's arms new lustre take,
To deck the pomp of battle. Rousse's Tancrède.

TO HAIL. v. a. [from the noun.] To salute; to call to.
A galley well appointed, with a long boat, drawing near unto the shore, was hailed by a Turk, accompanied with a troop of horsemen. Knolles's History of the Turks.

I thrice call upon my name, thrice beat your breast,
And hail me thrice to everlasting rest. Dryden.
HA'ILED. adj. [from hail.] Struck with hail.
HA'ILSHOT. n. f. [hail and shot.] Small shot scattered like hail.

The master of the artillery did visit them sharply with murdering hailshots, from the pieces mounted towards the top of the building. Clayward.

HA'ILSTONE. n. f. [hail and stone.] A particle or single ball of hail.
You are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun. Shakespeare.

Hard hailstones lye not thicker on the plain,
Nor shaken oaks such show'rs of acorns rain. Dryden.
HA'ILY. adj. [from hail.] Consisting of hail.
From whose dark womb a rattling tempest pours,
Which the cold North congeals to hail flowers. Pope.

HAIR. n. f. [hæp, Saxon.]
1. One of the common teguments of the body. It is to be found upon all the parts of the body, except the soles of the feet and palms of the hands. When we examine the hairs with a microscope, we find that they have each a round ballous root, which lies pretty deep in the skin, and which draws their nourishment from the surrounding humours: that each hair consists of five or six others, wrap'd up in a common tegu-ment or tube. They grow as the nails do, each part near the root thrusting forward that which is immediately above it, and not by any liquor running along the hair in tubes, as plants grow. Quincy.

2. A single hair.
My fleece of woolly hair uncurls. Shakespeare's Tit. And.
Shall the difference of hair only, on the skin, be a mark of a different internal constitution between a changeling and a drill? Locke.

Naughty lady,
These hairs which thou do'st ravish from my chin,
Will quicken and accuse thee. Shakespeare's King Lear.
Much is breeding;
Which, like the courier's hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleopatra.

3. Any thing proverbially small.
Or less than just a pound; if the scale turn
But in the estimation of a hair.
Thou diest. Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.

He judges to a hair of little indecencies, and knows better than any man what is not to be written. Dryden.
4. Courtes; order; grain; the hair falling in a certain direction.
Mr. doctor, he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies: if you should fight, you go against the hair of your profession. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

HA'IRBRAINED. adj. [This should rather be written hairs- brained, unconscious, unsettled, wild as a bare.] Wild; irregular; unsteady.
Let's leave this town; for they are hairbrained slaves,
And hale him up and down. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

HA'IRBREADTH. n. f. [hair and breadth.] A very small distance; the diameter of a hair.
Seven hundred chosen men left-handed could sling stones at an hairbreadth, and not miss. Judge, xx. 16.

I spoke of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field;
Of hairbreadth 'scapes in th' imminent deadly breach. Shak.

HA'IRBEL. n. f. The name of a flower; the hyacinth.
HA'IRCLOTH. n. f. [hair and cloth.] Stuff made of hair, very rough and prickly, worn sometimes in mortification.
It is composed of reeds and parts of plants woven together, like a piece of haircloth. Grew's Microscop.

HA'IRBLAZE.

HAL

HAIRLACE. n. f. [hair and lace.] The fillet with which women tie up their hair.
Worms are commonly resembled to a woman's hairlace or fillet, thence called tenia. Harvey on Consumption.

If Molly happens to be careless,
And thou neglects to warm her hairlace,
She gets a cold as sure as death. Swift.

HA'IRLESS. adj. [from hair.] Without hair.
White beads have arm'd thy thin and hairless scalps Against thy majesty. Shakespeare's Richard II.

HA'IRINESS. n. f. [from hair.] The state of being covered with hairs, or abounding with hair.
HA'IRY. adj. [from hair.] Covered with hair.
1. Overgrown with hair; covered with hair.
She has hairy temples then had rounded With coronet of flowers. Shakespeare's Midsum. Night's Dream.

Children are not hairy, for that their skins are more perspirable. Bacon's Natural History.
2. Consisting of hair.
Storms have shed
From vines the hairy honours of their head. Dryd. Virgil.

HAKE. n. f. A kind of fish.
The coast is plentifully stored with mackerel and hake.
Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

HA'KOT. n. f. [from hale.] A kind of fish.
HAL is derived like al from the Saxon hæle, i. e. a hale, a palace. In Gothic al signifies a temple, or any other famous building. Gibbon's Camden.

HA'LBERT. n. f. [haleberds, French; halberde, Dutch, from hale, an ax, and berde, a court, halberds being the common weapons of guards.] A battle-ax fixed to a long pole.
Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or I'll strike thee to my foot. Shakespeare's Richard III.

Our halberds did shut up his passage. Shakespeare's Henry VI.
Four knives in garbs fuccinate, a trusty band,
Caps on their heads, and halberds in their hand,
Draw forth to combat on the velvet plain. Pope.

HA'LBERDIER. n. f. [halberdier, French, from halberd.] One who is armed with a halberd.
The dutches appointed him a guard of thirty persons, hal- berdiers, in a livery of murrey and blue, to attend his person.
Bacon's Henry VII.

The king had only his halberdiers, and fewer of them than used to go with him. Clarendon.
HA'LCYON. n. f. [halcyon, Latin.] A bird, of which it is said that she breeds in the sea, and that there is always a calm during her incubation.

Such smiling rogues, as these, sooth ev'ry passion,
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With ev'ry gale and vary of their matters. Shakespeare's K. Lear.

Amidst our arms as quiet you shall be,
As halcyon brooding on a Winter day. Dryden's Ind. Emp.
HA'LCYON. adj. [from the noun.] Placid; quiet; still;
peaceful.
When great Augustus made war's tempests cease,
His halcyon days brought forth the arts of peace. Denham.

No man can expect eternal serenity and halcyon days from so incompetent and partial a cause, as the constant course of the sun in the equinoctial circle. Bentley's Sermon.

HALE. adj. [This should rather be written hail, from hæl, health.] Healthy; found; hearty; well complexioned.
My feely sheep like well below,
For they been hale enough I trow,
And liken their abode. Spenser's Pastorals.

Some of these wife partizans concluded the government had hired two or three hundred hale men, to be pinioned, if not executed, as representatives of the pretended captives.
Milton's Prebolder, N. 7.

His stomach too begins to fall;
Last year we thought him strong and hale,
But now he's quite another thing:
I wish he may hold out till Spring. Swift.

TO HALE. v. a. [hale, Dutch; haler, French.] To drag by force; to pull violently.
Fly to your house;
The plebeians have got your fellow tribune,
And hale him up and down. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

My third comfort,
Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast
Hail'd out to murder. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.
Give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him, lest he hale thee to the judge. Lu. xii. 58.

He by the neck hath hal'd, in pieces cut,
And set me as a mark on every butt. Sandys.
Thither by harpy-footed furies hal'd,
At certain revolutions, all the damns Are brought. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.

This sinistrous gravity is drawn that way by the great artery, which then subside, and haleth the heart into it. Brewer.
Who would not be disgusted with any recreation, in itself indifferent, if he should with blows be haled to it when he had no mind? Locke.

HAL

In all the tumults at Rome, though the people proceeded sometimes to pull and hale one another about, yet no blood was drawn 'till the time of the Gracchi. Swift.

HA'LER. n. f. [from hale.] He who pulls and hales.
HALF. n. f. plural. [hælf, Saxon, and all the Teutonic dialects. The l is often not sounded.]

1. A moiety; one part of two; an equal part.
An half acre of land. 1 Sa. xiv. 14.
Many might go to heaven with half the labour they go to hell, if they would venture their industry the right way.
Ben. Johnson's Discoveries.

Well chosen friendship, the most noble
Of virtues, all our joys makes double,
And into halves divides our trouble. Denham.
Or what but riches is there known
Which man can solely call his own;
In which no creature goes his half,
Unless it be to squint and laugh? Hudibras, p. ii.

No mortal tongue can half the beauty tell;
For none but hands divine could work so well. Dryden.
Of our manufacture foreign markets took off one half, and the other half were consumed amongst ourselves. Locke.

The council is made up half out of the noble families, and half out of the plebeian. Addison on Italy.
Half the misery of life might be extinguished, would men alleviate the general curse by mutual compassion. Addison.

Her beauty, in thy foster half Bury'd and lost, the ought to grieve. Prior.
Natural was it for a prince, who had propos'd to himself the empire of the world, not to neglect the sea, the half of his dominions. Arbutnot on Coins.

2. It sometimes has a plural signification when a number is divided.
Had the land selected of the best,
Half had come hence, and let the world provide the rest. Dryden.

3. It is much used in composition to signify a thing imperfect, as the following examples will show.
HALF. adv. In part; equally.
I go with love and fortune, two blind guides,
To lead my way; half loth, and half contenting. Dryden.

HALF-BLOOD. n. f. One not born of the same father and mother.
Which shall be heir of the two male twins, who, by the dissection of the mother, were laid open to the world? Whether a filer by the half-blood shall inherit before a brother's daughter by the whole blood? Locke.

HALF-BLOODED. adj. [half and blood.] Mean; degenerate.
The lone alone lies not in your good will.
—Nor in thine, lord.
—Half-blooded fellows, yes. Shakespeare's King Lear.

HALF-CAP. n. f. Cap imperfectly put off, or faintly moved.
After distasteful looks, and these hand fractions,
With certain half-caps and cold moving nods,
They froze me into silence. Shakespeare's Timon of Athens.

HALF-DEAD. n. f. [half and dæl, Saxon.] Part. Spenser.
HALF-FACED. adj. [half and faced.] Showing only part of the face; small faced.
Proud incroaching tyranny
Burns with revenging fire, whose hopeful colours Advance, a half-faced sun striving to shine. Shak. Hen. VI.

This same half-faced fellow, Shadow; give me this man:
he presents no mark to the enemy: the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. Shak. Henry IV.

HALF-HATCHED. adj. [half and hatch.] imperfectly hatched.
Here, thick as hailstones pour,
Turnips, and half-hatch'd eggs, a mingled show'r,
Among the rabble rain. Gay's Trivia.

HALF-HEARD. adj. Imperfectly heard; not heard to an end.
Not added years on years my talk could close;
Back to thy native islands might'st thou fall,
And leave half-heard the melancholy tale. Pope's Odysey.

HALF-MOON. n. f.
1. The moon in its appearance when at half increase or decrease.
2. Any thing in the figure of a half moon.
